

Dear Uncle Bill,

As you probably already know, you missed our tenth-year class reunion. You sure did miss some surprising news from all of our classmates. Since you were not present, we thought we would let you in on some of the news.

JoAnn Whitfield is playing pro-football for the Washington Redskins, and, just last year, the Redskins played the Miami Dolphins led by Quarterback, Jr. Simms. Jr. received minor injuries from the numerous sacks by JoAnn; however, he remained unintimidated and set the Super Bowl record for the most interceptions ever thrown. After an early retirement from the Dallas Cowboys, Harvey Briggs has opened a florist shop next to John Wetherington's ballet studio.

After completing his best seller, 101 WAYS TO SLIM YOUR WAIST, THIGHS, AND BUTTOCKS, Doug Campbell, playing for the San Francisco 49's, has become quite famous. He recently took over the position of the Pillsbury Dough Boy. On the other end of the rope, Casey Lanier has also gained stardom. He is now head-cheerleader for the Dallas Cowboys.

On the other hand, Charles Shackelford hasn't been very lucky. After being drafted by the Phoenix Suns, Charles, while on his famous "Shack Attack," managed to get his neck tangled in the basketball rim. He is presently recovering.

Professional tag-team wrestlers Antoinette Gilchrist and Joe Cobb have received good and bad luck. They proudly displayed their television title and World Championship belts at the reunion. Antoinette wore her mask and boots while Joe proudly displayed his 200-stitch operation. He apparently tried to walk through a locked glass door, but this minor injury shouldn't affect their world tour.

Adrienne Classen and Bob Sabiston have pursued their careers in Paris, France.

Surprisingly, Adrienne has turned her Olympic horse-riding talents into the vice-presidency of the Greenthorn Glue Factory. Bob can be seen sitting on the sidewalks of Paris, painting his poor little heart out. Bob also makes his living by painting portraits of tourists in Paris.

Talented Billy Raney is still singing strongly. He is currently working with Jermaine Jackson on a new album after changing his name from Billy to Ramone.

After being elected Chairman of the Board of the Weebles Company in Anchorage, Alaska, Susan Wiggs acquired several jobs singing at various nightclubs.

After becoming a pediatrician, Jack Penasota, while entertaining several children in his office, broke his neck while spinning on the point of his head. In his spare time, Jack also tours the country as the poster boy for Planters Peanuts. LouAnn Bowen has appeared on several episodes of "Ripley's Believe It or Not" as "Cherrilu." She is also employed at Disney World in Florida where she lives with her husband and seven kids.

Billy Williams is now a fashion designer. He has recently become quite famous, and his name can be found on shirts, ties, and pants in all clothing stores. In the near future, he plans to extend his designer line to underwear, socks, and shoestrings.

Chris Solomon and Tony Baker have become multimillionaires by monopolizing the candy industry in the Northern Hemisphere of the world. Their company, "Sweetboys Incorporated," is destined to control the world.

Both John Oxford and Jon Sergeant have become financially stable, in other words, quite rich. John Oxford completed an eight-year program in the Janitorial Arts and has become very successful. He bought the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and has become a permanent resident. Jon Sergeant finally moved from the campus of UNC to New York where he went into business for himself. He now owns a successful chain of Rent-a-Johns.

Joe and Sonji are enjoying their four-year stay at the White House where Susan and James are temporary guests with their four children. James and Susan were kindly taken in after being soundly defeated by Joe and Sonji for the Presidency. James and Susan have settled for Senate positions.

Tom Vermillion and Donald Pollock are now TV stars. Tom majored in drama at UNC and has attained a leading role in a Charles Atlas advertisement. He seems to enjoy getting sand kicked in his face. Donald acquired a leading role in the hit movie KING KONG VS. THE GRAPE APE. Derrick Burney, on the other hand, is now starring on a TV show co-hosting with Richard Simmons every morning.

After graduating from UNC, David Washburn has calmed down slightly by publishing his best seller entitled HOW TO CONTROL THE MALE EGO. David has become a well-known author. Adrienne travels the country auctioneering for many livestock events.

Matt Johnson and Regina Haddock opened a hair boutique together in Iowa and have become quite successful, except for one minor mishap. Matt is recovering from chemical burns he received while formulating a new hair tonic. But, of course, the queen of hair Melissa "Vidal" Ott is making big bucks off a new gel that turns your hair five colors at once!

But, Uncle Bill, listen to this! Denise Terry and her striptease show were really hot until Sarah Shackelford quit. But now Bernadine Anthony is the star, and they are booked solid!

We hope you have enjoyed the news. Maybe you can attend our twentieth year reunion. Who knows what news will come next?

Sincerely,
The Class of 1985
